How to get to Edinburgh University's Appleton Tower from the centre of Edinburgh

This is an approximately 15-minute journey (by foot) from Princes Street to Appleton Tower on Edinburgh University's central campus. Images are taken from Google Maps.
